Chapter 1 by Mister Moccasin

"I'm sorry, but we're going to have to fire you Milo"

"That's a good thing though, right?"

"No Milo. The meaning doesn't change just because we're firefighters. In fact your positive view on fires is why you're getting fired."

Chapter 2 by R

Milo stared at them. "Did I ever fail a job? I always got the people out safely, and I stopped the fires from spreading -" He started, but his boss just stared at them.

"But you didn't put the fires out. Our job, as firefighters, isn't just to save the people but also to put the fires out. You understand that, right?"

Milo stared blankly. He didn't understand what the problem was. "The fires were pretty." He told them. "I thought people like pretty things-"

"Fire is also destructive, Milo. I'm sorry, but you're fired." As soon as Milo had left the office, the chief made a phone call to the police. "We have a suspect on the Arson watch list." He said, watching from the window as the suspect's car sped on the street, watching the cars go by.

It was for the best.
